

Catalonia is Activity & Nature Holidays

Bathed by the Mediterranean, Catalonia lies in southern Europe, in the northeast of the Iberian Peninsula. The attractions for visitors to this tiny country, with a surface area of less than 32,000 square kilometres and a population of just seven million, but with a history and culture going back a thousand years or more and its own language – factors which have helped to shape its distinctive personality – are many and varied. These attractions include splendid natural heritage, excellent communications, superb climate and top-quality active and nature holiday facilities, all combined with a huge and varied range of outstanding restaurants and accommodation, and much more.

Catalonia offers a great number of ideal active and nature tourism spaces for people who will enjoy the diversity of its landscape s, which stretch from the highest peaks of the Pyrenees to the most tucked-away coves of the Mediterranean, embracing the hinterland plains of Catalonia, the natural spaces of the River Ebro Delta and the lands of the province of Lleida.

This catalogue brings together an inventory of proposals that have been selected on the basis of the offer of companies and institutions that are members of Catalan Tourist Board Activity & Nature Holidays. Whether they are companies and enterprises providing services, or tourism promotion bodies, the members of the Club work together to promote and market leisure activities that may be enjoyed in a way that respects the natural environment.

Hiking Nature's trails

Catalonia is a country that offers all the necessary conditions for enjoyable hiking, with a network of some five thousand kilometres of long-distance tracks and some four thousand kilometres in short walks and local paths.

Most of the paths you will be covering have been opened up and marked with signs since time immemorial by shepherds, military men and traders. The task of signposting these tracks has been continued in recent decades by hiking clubs and public bodies that have popularised the network of Catalan walking tracks that cross, among other areas of Catalonia, twelve natural parks and 144 protected natural spaces, all of them with special biological features or remarkable landscapes.

The Natural Parks of the Pyrenees

At the edge of the Catalan Pyrenees and bordering France and Aragon, Val d'Aran is a high mountain region surrounded by very high peaks and major cirques. Between this region and those of Pallars Sobirà and Alta Ribagorça lies Catalonia's only national park, Aigüestortes i Estany de Sant Maurici, with its impressive topography and great richness of fauna and vegetation, as well as its concentration of over two hundred lakes where we can organise different routes along which there are surprises in the form of waterfalls and the sources of different streams.

The western Pyrenees is home to the routes of two long-distance paths, the GR-211, which runs through the interior of Val d'Aran, and the GR-11, which crosses the whole country from west to east until finally reaching the Mediterranean by way of Cap de Creus. The section passing through Boí Valley in Alta Ribagorça, offers a visit to the monumental set of nine Romanesque churches that have been included in the UNESCO World Heritage Site list. One very popular route in Aigüestortes National Park is that known as Carros de Foc (Chariots of Fire), which includes nine refuges in the park and their natural settings.

Another walk that gives the hiker close knowledge of different parts of the western Pyrenees is the Porta del Cel (Gate of Heaven) route, which includes a climb to the peak known as the Pica d'Estats (3,143 m), the highest in Catalonia, and also the Certascan peak (2,853 m). The path runs through Alt Pirineu Natural Park, the largest in Catalonia, lying between Pallars Sobirà and Alt Urgell, with departure and arrival points in the village of Tavascan. Further to the south, in the uninhabited village of El Pont d'Orrit, in the Pallars Jussà region, is the start of the Vulture Valley (Vall dels Voltors) Route, which crosses the richly endowed landscape of La Terreta Valley and is notable for the presence of the vultures that have given their name to the walk. Again, in the same area of the Pyrenees, that of the Alt Urgell region and the zone of Boí, are the starting points of routes that combine hiking and thermal springs.

Cadí-Moixeró Natural Park, one of the spaces of richest biological diversity in Catalonia and located between the Berguedà, Cerdanya and Alt Urgell regions, offers a wide

The Way of Saint James in Catalonia

Since the Middle Ages, the Way of Saint James has led pilgrims from all over Europe to the tomb of the apostle in Santiago de Compostela in Galicia. On its way through Catalonia, it constitutes a network of trails that may be covered on foot, by bicycle or on horseback, affording its many walkers the opportunity to set out on their pilgrimage from Catalonia, which acts as the point of access for pilgrims in the Mediterranean basin. Catalonia's stretch of the Way of Saint James runs across the inland until it reaches Alfarràs, Alcarràs and Batea, where it joins up with the corresponding routes in Aragon that bring the French Way through Montsó and Jaca, to Saragossa through Fraga or along the Ebro Way, respectively. Noteworthy landmarks along the Catalan Way include the Monastery of Sant Pere de Rodes, the Monastery of Montserrat and the Seu Vella (Old Cathedral) in Lleida, as well as sites and monuments of great interest such as the historic centres of the towns of Igualada, Tortosa, Tarragona and Cervera. It also passes alongside a number of Romanesque churches, among other sites featuring notable monuments, such as the monasteries of Poblet. Santes Creus and Vallbona de les Monges, not to mention spots rich in flora and fauna such as Ivars Lake, which has an interesting bird observatory. The signposting along this route is characterised by a blue pennant featuring the scallop shell as its emblem. Some of these sections are accessible and the Way of Saint James passes through various accessible tourist destinations.

range of different types of excursions, amongst which is climbing Pedraforca, one of the iconic places of Catalan rambling.

One of the most popular crossings in Cadí-Moixeró Natural Park, and one that is suitable for everyone, is the Way of the Good Men, which runs from the Queralt sanctuary through to Montségur castle, in the Ariège region of France. This covers the migratory routes taken by the Cathars (the "Good Men") as they fled the persecution of the Catholic Church in the Middle Ages. The itinerary, marked as GR-107, has several variants, but the best-known among them is the route that connects Queralt, Gósol, Bagà, Belver de Cerdanya and the French border, at which point one may finish the itinerary or continue through to Montségur castle. The Way of the Good Men can also be covered on horseback and, in many sections, by bicycle.

In recent years, the Cavalls del Vent (Horses of Wind) trail has also become very popular, this being a circular route that links eight alpine refuges between Berguedà and Cerdanya.

Between Volcanoes and the Costa Brava

Always bearing in mind the walker's interest in the natural environment, the eastern Catalan Pyrenees and the Costa Brava offer different kinds of routes. Hence, one might discover the Girona Pyrenees or walk the Romanesque Route in Vall de Ribes in a beautiful setting with a rich architectural and artistic heritage.

Other routes combine the attractions of Romanesque art with those of the natural spaces of Ripollès or Camprodon Valley, with more than 900 kilometres of marked paths. The zone of Garrotxa offers a number of paths going from one volcano to another. There are more than forty volcanoes to see as well as twenty basaltic lava outflows over which have appeared places such as the Fageda d'en Jordà, a beechwood in the extensive Zona Volcànica de la Garrotxa Natural Park, of which is the best example of volcanic landscape in the Iberian Peninsula. At this point, it is possible to set out on a route of some 72 kilometres running between escarpments and volcanoes to cross the region of Garrotxa until entering Aiguamolls de l'Empordà Natural Park, a wetlands zone and start of the Blunderbuss Route, which is associated with muleteers and bandits (trabucaires), the ancestral users of these tracks. After the publication of Javier Cercas' novel Soldiers of Salamis, it is now possible to take the Salamis Route that goes through different historic sites of the Spanish Civil War in the Pla d'Estany region. We also suggest a walk along the Costa Brava on the GR-92, which runs the whole length of the Mediterranean coastline of Catalonia.

Using Itinerànnia, a network of more than 2,500 kilometres of marked paths, it is possible to walk the Ripollès, la Garrotxa and Alt Empordà regions and thereby cover the distance from the Pyrenees through to the Mediterranean.

Hikers on the Estany del Diable path (Pirineus)

Cistercians, Els Ports and Montsant

In the south of Catalonia, the GR-175, the Cistercian Route, traces a circular route that links the monasteries of Santes Creus, Vallbona and Poblet. The Monastery of Poblet, founded in the 12th century, is notable for its royal pantheon in which are entombed the remains of a considerable number of members of the royal families of Catalonia and Aragon, for example King James I (1208–1276). Poblet is a monumental set of buildings that has been designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site, which makes this a very appealing route for history lovers, while the natural setting is also of unquestionable appeal thanks to its landscape, which has been declared a Natural Site of National Interest.

In the southernmost end of the country, bordering Aragon and the Valencia Region, Els Ports Natural Park, located to the south of the lower course of the River Ebro, offers routes of particular interest to observers of flora and fauna, for example the Stars of the South (Estels del Sud) Route, a walk around the foot of the mountains linking five refuges in the natural park. The route can be done in five days for the complete crossing or less than one day as a set walk.

Still in the south of Catalonia, in the Ebro region (Terres de l'Ebre), one may also enjoy a number of routes in Serra del Montsant Natural Park and the protected space of the Serra de Llaberia, or opt for tracks around the Priorat zone, taking old bridle paths or, if preferred the route through the cellars of the top-quality Designation of Origin (DO) wines of Montsant and Priorat (Qualified Designation of Origin – DOQ).

The Three Mountains, Montserrat and the Ter

The Three Mountains Route is a good way to discover the pre-littoral country. The route links the natural parks of Montseny, Sant Llorenç del Munt i Serra de l'Obac, and Montserrat with a path of one hundred and six kilometres divided into six stages. Montserrat is at once a natural park unlike any other in the world, one of the country's most important museums and also sanctuary of the patroness of Catalonia, the Black Virgin of Montserrat. The abruptly rising Montserrat massif, one of the highest groups of mountains in Catalonia's pre-littoral range, is crowned by a Benedictine monastery at a height of 725 metres above sea level, while the summit of Sant Jeroni is 1,236 metres above sea level. The course of the one-day Matagalls-Montserrat race, which boasts the highest number of participants in Catalonia, covers this zone.

Still in central Catalonia, but now in the Osona region, we recommend the GR-210 path, the River Ter Route (Camí Vora el Ter), which runs from Castell de Montesquiu Park to the Sau reservoir, and also a network of complementary tracks such as the GR-151 Paths of the Bishop and Abbot Oliba, which enable the walker to select the most suitable combinations from the peaks of the Milany and Bellmunt ranges down to the tail end of the Sau reservoir.

Cycle tourism and mountain biking (BTT) Enjoying the country on two wheels

The variety of landscapes and the mild climate of Catalonia are an enticement to enjoy cycle tourism and mountain biking the whole year round.

Cycle tourism

Catalonia has five greenways built over former railway tracks, which foster sustainable, non-motorised mobility for cyclists and walkers. These trails, which are generally not steep, have markers and are suitable for people with reduced mobility or young children. In the eastern zone of the Pre-Pyrenees, there is a track of 135 kilometres that takes in the Iron and Coal Route, which begins in Ripoll and ends in Ogassa after passing through Sant Joan de les Abadesses; and the Little Railway Route, following the old railway line, which offers two possible variants, one from Olot to Girona (54 km) and the other from Girona to Sant Feliu de Guíxols (40 km). In the south of Catalonia, the greenways through the Baix Ebre and Terra Alta regions, each one of 27 kilometres, offer magnificent natural settings. The former runs through the Ebro Delta, a natural space of abundant bird life and gentle orography close to the sea. The latter runs through mountain passes and the Pàndols and Cavalls ranges, where it is still possible to find trenches and other relics of the Spanish Civil War.

From the interior through to the tucked-away coves of the Costa Brava, the Empordà region invites the visitor to discover its territory in a gradual and relaxed manner. The best way of doing so is by means of cycle tourism, a well-established pastime in Catalonia and a good way of organising holidays with family and friends. The Baix Empordà Cycle Tourism Network covers a zone with 370 kilometres of bicycle tracks. It is also possible to cross the Pla de l'Estany region, cycling along the Salamis Route.

In the Terres de Lleida region, there is a track in the Segre River basin that takes in asphalted country roads and other local tracks with very little traffic. Hence, on the western plain one can stop and find food and lodging in cities and towns like Lleida, Cervera, Agramunt and Balaguer and admire the architectural and cultural heritage of these municipalities. Along the way, there is a good network of hotels, rural guesthouses, refuges and restaurants where the cyclist can rest and recoup his or her energy.

In the south of Catalonia, in the Terres de l'Ebre region, the cyclist may go from Montblanc to the River Ebro, covering a zone that is very rich in terms of its culture and natural beauty and in which one can stop to contemplate and photograph the botanical and ornithological diversity of the area, or visit the Cistercian monasteries.

With most of the cycle tourism routes that we propose, it is possible to combine sporting activity with all kinds of other gastronomic (wineries, restaurants, etc.) and cultural (visiting museums, archaeological remains, monasteries, etc.) pleasures, which the whole family may enjoy. Catalonia has at least 800 kilometres of asphalted roads with very low levels of vehicular traffic, which are therefore ideal for cycling. Barcelona, for example, has a number of signposted tracks in the Collserola range, while different parts of the city has lanes for the exclusive use of cyclists.

Mountain biking (BTT)

The network of Mountain Bike Centres in Catalonia, the first in Spain, offers over 6.400 kilometres of signposted itineraries that are classified according to the degree of difficulty so that everybody, from the beginner to the expert, can enjoy mountain biking in a relaxed fashion with the help of any one of the eighteen Mountain Bike Centres of the network. The Mountain Bike Centres are spaces of free access that begin at a reception point where the tourist is offered information, panels with clearly presented details of the itineraries and the services the Centre offers for both bicycle and tourist, for example sanitary facilities, showers and bicycle renting, etc. The Mountain Bike Centre routes are usually circular and they avoid sections with vehicular traffic, and keep asphalted surfaces and two-way roads to a minimum.

By mountain biking one can discover the beauty of Val d'Aran's landscape, do the Cadí-Moixeró ring route along the impressive escarpments of the Cadí range, cover a section of the Way of the Good Men in the Berguedà region or go deep into central Catalonia, into the Sau-Collsacabra Valley where, in May, the popular Cabrerès-BTT event is held, this being one of the major European mountain bike events. In the Terres de Lleida region, in Montsec, there are a number of routes through the largest extension of flatwater resources of Catalonia, the Noguera reservoirs.

Closer to the sea, one can go from the Pyrenees to the Costa Brava by mountain bike, covering the last kilometres with the Mediterranean at one's feet; on the Costa del Maresme, not far from Barcelona, there is a route through the hermitages and tracks of the Montnegre range; while in the Costa Daurada there are several mountain bike tracks, some in the mountain zones and others along the beaches.

Further information on Mountain Bike Centres in Catalonia and the Transcatalunya Route: www.btt.catalunya.com and www.transcatalunya.catalunya.com

The Catalan Tourist Board has launched a long-distance circular mountain bike itinerary known as the Transcatalunya. It covers the entire land by means of linking up the different sections joining the Mountain Bike Centres of the network.

CATALUNYA

Sports Tourism Destinations (DTE)

Sports Tourism Destination (DTE) is a rating of specialisation that has been created by the Catalan Tourist Board. It is awarded to destinations that are notable for the high-quality resources and services they offer to top-ranking sportspeople, professionals, amateurs and tourists who wish to engage in such sporting activities as mountain biking. They provide installations that meet the needs of every kind of sport, giving special attention to sanitary facilities, sports medicine, along with an appealing tourism (natural parks, beaches, culture, gastronomy, etc.) and commercial offer and an ideal climate for sporting activities all year round. At present, the DTE sites of La Seu d'Urgell, Banyoles and Santa Susanna are mountain bike certified.

White waters

The appeal of the turbulent river

With the coming of the spring thaw, the Noguera Ribagorçana, Noguera Pallaresa, Garonne and Segre rivers become ideal places to experience waters with undercurrents and whirlpools.

The Two Noguera

Travelling down the wild waters of the Noguera Pallaresa is an activity that has its origins in the river transport of timber by means of rafts, vessels constructed with oak cross trunks, bound together with birch shoots and with a rudder at either end. Since 1979, each first Sunday of July, La Pobla de Segur celebrates its long-established rafting festival. This begins on the Saturday with the traditional construction of rafts and the next day the rafters, dressed as they did in olden times, cover a six-kilometre stretch of the river after which the great festivities begin. In the professional domain of white water sports, the International Noguera Pallaresa Rally is held every summer in Sort.

The Noguera Pallaresa River offers forty kilometres of navigable waters in both winter and summer as its flow can be adjusted. The towns of Sort and Llavorsí are reference points for the activities of rafting and "bus-bob" – an inflatable, sausage-shaped craft for four or five people seated one behind another – as well as other sports with the hydro sled, canoe, open (sit-on-top) kayaks and standard kayaks.

Canyoning in the Noguera Ribagorçana and Pallars zone offers a combination of the techniques of mountain climbing and potholing with water rides and also some swimming. The activity consists in climbing down the walls of ravines and crossing small waterfalls through narrow gullies. In the Pallars zone the Berrós, Sant Pere, Estaron, Viu de Llevata, Gurp and the Infern ravines are particularly well known, these being located in La Pobla de Segur. Canyoning is a very widespread sport in Catalonia and the Costa Brava has especially interesting offers as well.

The Segre and Garonne rivers

Inaugurated for the 1992 Olympic Games, Segre Olympic Park is a first-rate facility for the sports of rafting, canoe-kayak and canoeing. The installation, which is five hundred metres long and of adjustable flow, offers group rides in inflatable boats, or hydro sled and the hiring of rowing boats. Canoeing courses are also offered in the park, a discipline in which visitors can also be initiated in the Ponts and Camarasa reservoirs, halfway along the River Segre.

The Garonne River, with its source in the Pla de Beret, in the middle of Val d'Aran, from whence it flows towards France, offers several white water stretches that are a perfect setting for canyoning. Rafting is concentrated in white water reaches such as El Caos, L'Era Lòssa and L'Era Tortuga.

In the Vall de Rialb zone, rapids passing through steep rocks also offer thrilling canyoning in the gorges formed by the Rialb River.

Rowing and sailing

A host of sea and river activities

The history of Catalonia is very much linked with its rivers and the sea. This relationship has given rise to its own kinds of boats and first-rate port facilities all along the coast, not to mention a wide range of activities for the whole family to enjoy.

Nowadays, the Catalan coastline attracts visitors from all around the world who come to partake of the many offers the Mediterranean holds out, whether it is taking a cruise an a skippered vessel or using the Costa Brava port facilities, for example the L'Estartit-Medes Islands Nautical Resort, with its fascinating marine-life showcase constituted by the Medes Islands and the Montgrí coast. Just when it seems that the mountain range is about to die on reaching the shore, it branches out and rises again in the form of an island a few miles off the coast, forming an internationally renowned protected marine reserve.

Nautical resorts are spaces for tourist and recreational activities that foster nautical tourism in the sense of active holidays in contact with the sea, with the opportunity of engaging in all kinds of leisure-time activities related with its waters, this being complemented with a range of types of accommodation, along with enjoying nature and other tourist attractions and leisure activities in the environs. Here it is possible to learn how to water ski, or windsurf and discover the different kinds of rowing sports.

Not far from Barcelona, one can enjoy the romantic, ancestral activity of sailing on board a skippered yacht while contemplating the shoreline stretching out from the city. Particularly notable are the Costa del Maresme, which boast a major concentration of marinas and a nautical resort, or the Costa del Garraf with beautiful towns such as Vilanova i la Geltrú and Sitges, the latter of which is home to a very significant heritage of Modernista (Catalan Art Nouveau) art.

One of the country's traditional vessels is the Catalan llagut, a lateen-rigged skiff, aboard which one may row out to sea from the port of Tarragona, an old Roman city with an abundant Roman heritage to discover and admire. The Costa Daurada offer consists of a great array of possibilities of things to do in relation with the sea, with many activities organised by the nautical resorts, which have ideal facilities for the practice of any kind of nautical sport in a sea of long beaches, shallow waters, gently rolling landscapes and fine, clean sand.

In the domain of freshwater sports, the Pre-Pyrenees reservoirs often represent a quieter and more relaxed alternative for lovers of rowing and kayaking. The peaceful waters of Lake Banyoles, along with the reservoirs of the River Segre in the Terres de Lleida region, or the Sau reservoir in the Osona region (Catalunya Central) are very good options. In the south of the country, in the River Ebro environment, one can engage in water sports on the Flix and Riba-roja reservoirs, with a variety of boats with oars or paddles, such as different kinds of canoe and the kayak, landing on the shore, penetrating river reaches, drawing in close to a forest on the bank, and contemplating the diversity of fauna, especially birds, of the delta. It is also possible to go on cruises along the Ebro and to hire boats for the whole family. In this regard, the companies that offer guides and canoes for hire also suggest river routes tailored to the preferences of their clients.

International Competitions

Various international competitions are held in Catalonia throughout the year such as the international canoe half marathon in March/April in Lake Banyoles. The Catalan coast has also played host to prestigious events such as the World Championship of Freestyle Windsurfing in Empuriabrava, and the World Cup-Grand Catalonia Prize windsurfing competition in Sant Pere Pescador.

Underwater activities Beauty beneath the water's surface

Whether you are an experienced diver, or you'd like to be initiated into exploring the sea's flora and fauna, you will find several points along the Catalan coastline where you can discover a whole underwater world.

In the Medes Islands Marine Reserve, on the Costa Brava, a place of steep crags and crystalline waters, you can make your first dive off the town of L'Estartit and, assisted by experienced monitors, you will learn the basic rules of undersea diving. Just under a kilometre from the L'Estartit coast, this archipelago of seven small islands is a place where you can also do snorkelling, and enjoy viewing a range of protected marine flora and fauna. The depth is generally around ten of fifteen metres but it drops to fifty at some points where there are some very beautiful caves.

The fish are not afraid to approach the divers in these warm clear waters so that diving here is a very fine opportunity for lovers of underwater photography. Hence, with the coming of summer each year, the MIMA (Medes, Image and Environment) International Festival is held and it includes an internationally prestigious underwater photography competition. Here, and in other places along the Catalan coast, associations engaged in underwater activities organise group outings to clean the seabed.

Costa del Garraf and Barcelona

Since 1952, when Catalonia's first diving club was founded, the country has been moving ahead in this sport, which is widely enjoyed today. In the centre of the Catalan coast-line, the Costa del Garraf offer a large number of underwater activities. The numerous beaches and exceptional climate, along with four marinas in Vilanova i la Geltrú, Sitges and Cubelles, are excellent starting points for all kinds of water sports and activities throughout the year. In Barcelona, several sports associations offer diving courses and new underwater habitats are being upgraded in order to favour the natural process of regeneration. These are to be found off the Parc d'Esculls (Reef Park), which runs from the Mar Bella beach through to the new entrance of the port.

Costa Daurada and the Terres de l'Ebre

The diversity of the Costa Daurada and the Terres de l'Ebre, with their kilometres-long beaches, offers a wide range of opportunities for underwater activities. Under the waters of the Ebro coast is a seabed with rock formations full of cavities in which you can admire the Mediterranean's most significant colonies of posidonia. With a view to revealing the secrets of the seabed, several companies and entities offer underwater activities ranging from beginners' courses through to routes for more experienced divers.

Nature

In touch with the natural environment

In the space of a few kilometres, the geography of the Catalan territory presents a great variety of landscapes, vegetation and fauna.

Catalonia enjoys exceptional geological diversity, with sediment materials such as slate in the northern zone; calcareous rock near the coast in the Pre-Pyrenees area and sand and clay that is used as potters' clay in the hinterland zones. It also has great geographical variety. Catalonia has five hundred and eighty kilometres of coast, extending from Cap de Creus to the Costa Brava and through to the Ebro region. This coast is home to natural spaces that are vital for the fauna of southern Europe, for example Ebro Delta Natural Park and Aiguamolls de l'Empordà, or the Medes Islands Marine Reserve, a place of extraordinary natural value owing to its marine resources. This is also a mountainous land, from the highest peaks of above three thousand metres in Val d'Aran, through to the cliffs of Cap de Creus. The Catalan Pyrenees constitute an outstanding nature strip of two hundred and thirty kilometres, with sixty points notable for their qualities as natural spaces and ten reserves designated for special protection, forming part of the total of 331,661 hectares of protected spaces in the country as a whole.

In the areas of the country's geography where there is intense aquatic activity, special care is taken in maintaining the seabed and the flora and fauna that inhabit it. We suggest you go diving to explore the depths of the sea off the Catalan coast in the Medes Islands where, accompanied by biologists, you will be able to see one of the western Mediterranean's major reserves of marine flora and fauna. In the sandy seabed, you will find a great number of caves and see the growth of red coral and other endangered species. Also in the Costa Brava, in the waters of the Alt Empordà region, cetacean-sighting cruises are offered.

In the interior, in the Berguedà zone, you can participate in organised activities to observe the Pre-Pyrenees flora and fauna while, in Val d'Aran, photographic events are held with a view to immortalising the autochthonous flowers of the region, as well as birdwatching and wild animal-spotting excursions.

Birdwatching tourism

Thanks to its geographical situation, Catalonia is a particularly special and attractive destination for birdwatchers from all over Europe. In a radius of two hundred kilometres around the city of Barcelona alone, there are several zones of great ornithological interest and exceptional for their biological richness.

One of the country's remarkable birdwatching zones is the delta formed by the River Ebro as it flows into the sea, forming the most extensive of Catalonia's wetlands. This is the habitat of some fifty of the Mediterranean's most important bird species. Other excellent birdwatching areas are Aiguamolls de l'Empordà and Ivars Lake; the Mediterranean landscapes of Els Ports, Cap de Creus and Montserrat; the Llobregat River Delta and four different Pyrenees and Pre-Pyrenees zones: Aigüestortes i Estany de Sant Maurici National Park, Cadí-Moixeró, Mont-rebei and La Terreta, and Núria Valley.

All of these zones have itineraries with good infrastructure in the form of observation and lookout points that offer fine views of the birds, signposted walks, information and interpretation centres, guides for cultural visits as well as hotel and country guesthouse accommodation and restaurants.

The Ornithological Tourist Guide of Catalonia

The Catalan Tourist Board has published a guide detailing the ornithological diversity of the Catalan territory by means of eleven itineraries structured into four groups: wetlands, Pyrenees and Pre-Pyrenees, Mediterranean lands and metropolitan environs. It also contains information about other natural spaces and zones, a birdwatcher's code of ethics and information of interest about entities related with ornithology in Catalonia as well as companies providing services for birdwatching tourism. Furthermore, there is a compendium of all the existing infrastructure to facilitate birdwatching: observation points, hides, signposted itineraries, information and interpretation centres, etc. The guide also indicates the areas that are accessible for people with reduced mobility.

The complete guide may be consulted at the web site: www.ornitologia.catalunya.com

Rock climbing Hugging mountains

Catalonia is one of the major international rock climbing destinations. Whether you are a seasoned rock climber or a beginner, you will enjoy the sensation of being body-to-body with the mountain.

The work done over the years by Catalan excursionists has been decisive in opening up many of the now-existing rock-climbing sites in the mountains. In Catalonia, rock climbers can enjoy scaling the highest peaks or rock faces of a multitude of cliffs and other places that are still little-known. In a single day, you can do danger-free guided climbs and learn different rock-scaling techniques.

The mountain of Montserrat is one of Catalonia's most emblematic places. Symbolic wellspring of many sociocultural, religious and political initiatives, it is also one of the country's most ideal places for rock climbing of all levels, thanks to the two hundred rock spires that crown it. Among the most symbolic high points are the Cavall Bernat which, every autumn, gives its name to an uninterrupted twenty-four-hour festival of rock climbing and exchange of experiences among mountain lovers.

The Pre-Pyrenees zone

From east to west, the Pre-Pyrenees zone offers a huge number of rock faces to scale. In the Pallars Jussà region is the narrow Collegats passage, which is formed by the erosion caused by the Noguera River, which also cuts through a number of ranges in the interior of the country, for example the Peracalç range to the west and the Cuberes and Boumort ranges to the east. The Collegats defile has five rock-climbing sectors: the Moles del Pessó, the Roca del Pessó, the Agulla del Gos, the Paret de la Figuereta and the Argenteria where, in winter, the waterfall becomes a cascade of ice dropping down over the rugged rocks and shining like silver (argent) in the sun – hence its name.

In the Montsec range, the rock climber will enjoy scaling the exceptional faces of Montrebei, Terradets and Vilanova de Meià. In the north-east of the country, Camprodon Valley is also home to places that are ideal for rock climbing, for example Rocabruna and Ulldeter, source of the River Ter, the main river of the Costa Brava.

Prades and Montsant and Els Ports

The south of the country has rugged landscapes that are greatly appreciated by rock climbers from all over the world. The Prades and Montsant ranges offer first-class rock faces, notable amongst which are those in the zones of La Mussara and La Riba, in particular Siurana, with hundreds of places for climbing now opened up in the rocks. Located between Catalonia, Aragon and the Valencia region, the massif of Els Ports offers climbs in some of the highest points of the hinterland. Outstanding here are the zones of rock channels, valleys and the Benet rocks, with some twenty climbs now open.

Vie Ferrate

These are vertical climbs with gear such as pitons, holds, rails and chains, making them suitable for non-expert climbers. A steel cable is installed to cover the whole climb for safety in case of falls. There are several places in Catalonia where these climbs are offered, for example ranges like Montserrat, Montsant, Oliana, Sant Martí de Sarroca, etc.

Snow

The splendour of the Catalan winter

With the coming of winter, a good proportion of tourism in Catalonia is concentrated in the zones of snow. The whole Pyrenees area offers a variety of activities and marvellous, spectacular white landscapes.

The network of ski resorts in the north of the country is extensive and a wide variety of activities is arranged through them for all kinds of visitors. In winter, snow activities flourish in places like Núria Valley, where many hikers set out on excursions to explore the environs of Puigmal peak, either ski mountaineering or walking with snowshoes. The same activities are also possible in Camprodon Valley, which is surrounded by peaks of almost three thousand metres high, for example Gra de Fajol, Puig de Bastiments, Geganta pass and La Dona peak.

In the region of Cerdanya, the paths used by hikers in the summer can also be taken in winter with snowshoes, or ski mountaineering, or by skimobile. This area also offers a great variety of tracks for Nordic skiing in the different ski resorts located among forests of mountain pine with splendid panoramic views of the Cadí range. In Pallars Sobirà, overlooked by the peak of Orri, in the Port-Ainé resort, visitors may enjoy skiercross and boardercross (a kind of snowboard).

The zone of Aigüestortes i l'Estany de Sant Maurici National Park, where everything is white in winter, is a first-class setting for snowshoe excursions. Meteorological effects cause the two hundred lakes of the area to freeze over, and these may be crossed if the temperature is low enough. Other winter snowshoe routes are the Carros de Foc (Chariots of Fire) track, with stops and shelter in different mountain refuges, or a weekend route in the environs of the Espot ski resort, which is particularly attractive for children. Other activities are also possible, for example going down the mountain by skimobile at night along well-marked tracks, or sleeping in a tepee in the Espot campsite, two thousand metres above sea level.

Outdoor snow activities include snowshoe excursions, horseback rides through the snow, constructing igloos and orientation courses in high mountain survival and in the use of ARVA (apparatus for rescuing avalanche victims) technology. Finally, the month of January is when the Pirena is held. One of the main and most newsworthy mushing competitions in the European calendar, it is notable both for the number of spectators and the tourist agencies and businesses involved. Over a period of a fortnight, people and dogs join forces to cross the whole Pyrenees in a competition that counts towards the International Federation Sled Dog Sports (IFSS) contest. Moreover, it has been declared an official competition by the Catalan and Spanish winter sports federations.

Horseback tourism Discover the country full rein

One good option for being in direct contact with nature, crossing valleys, and taking tracks along rivers, cliffs and beaches is discovering Catalonia on horseback.

Very near Barcelona, the Costa del Garraf offers a wide variety of tracks through the so-called lunar landscapes of the Garraf massif. Other interesting routes are the different itineraries through Montseny Natural Park or the paths in the interior such as those of the Castelltallat range in the Bages region, and Sau-Collsacabra Valley and the Lluçanès zone, in Osona. Again, the Maresme region offers several itineraries in contact with nature that may be covered riding a horse or donkey. Further to the north, the old Cathars' route the Way of the Good Men, which is marked as GR-107, offers a long itinerary through the mountains, from Berga through to Montségur (Ariège, France). This route of almost two hundred kilometres, crosses Cadí-Moixeró Natural Park, entering the high Pyrenees before crossing the border.

On horseback through the Pyrenees and the Terres de Ponent

In general, the whole Pyrenees zone has a very good offer for tourism on horseback. Val d'Aran has a great number of tracks and paths to be discovered on horseback, or with buggies and ponies for children in the company of a monitor, who will guide you through the region, starting from Vielha. One recommended stop is that of the Vilac lookout, from which you can observe the mountain scenery.

In the Ripollès region, there are wild horses and a number of equestrian facilities in Camprodon Valley and Ribes Valley, which have been joined since time immemorial by the Collada Verda pass. This zone combines idyllic scenery and a very significant heritage of Romanesque architecture. In Garrotxa, horse and rider may discover beautiful volcanic settings such as the Rocacorba mountain crest, the highest point of the route after which the volcanoes are left behind and the descent to the sea begins, passing through settings like Banyoles Lake and the medieval villages of the Pla de l'Estany plain. Following the River Ter, the route ends on the Mediterranean shore, on the Pals beach in the Costa Brava.

The Cistercian Route

Horseback riding in the Alt Urgell region makes it possible to enjoy the scenic variety of every valley, each one different from the rest. Further to the south, on the Vulture Valley (Vall dels Voltors) Route, the excursion on horseback goes through the natural environment of La Terreta Valley, where one can observe the local birdlife.

In the natural setting of the Cistercian Monastery of Poblet, which has been listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, one can discover one of the major gems of Catalan religious art. This monastery, along with those of Santes Creus in the Costa Daurada, and Vallbona de les Monges in the Terres de Lleida region, constitute the Cistercian Route, one that is overflowing with culture, tradition and Catalan heritage and that can be covered on horseback through a territory abounding in forests, vineyards and mountains.

Air

Bird's-eye Catalonia

Discovering Catalonia from the air is a fascinating journey in which you can admire both the peaks of the Pyrenees and idyllic seaside scenes, crossing plains, valleys and areas of dense vegetation.

One of the most spectacular sensations a human being can experience is that of the free fall. In Catalonia, you can enjoy parachuting and skydiving in the Castelló d'Empúries-Empuriabrava zone of the Costa Brava, one of Europe's most prestigious venues for these activities. In July the Beach Swoop Challenge parachuting contest is held here. For newcomers to the sport, professional monitors are on hand to help with the first jump from a height of four thousand metres, guiding the two-minute descent. This is a very powerful, unforgettable charge of adrenalin. Back in Empuriabrava – which, one should recall, is a Sports Tourism Destination (DTE) – there is a parachuting centre in which you can experience the sensation of the parachute jump without needing to go up in a plane. This is achieved by means of a modern wind tunnel, the world's biggest skydive simulator, with a vertical air current of 180-250 kilometres per hour to give the sensation of free falling.

Enjoying the landscape

If you prefer calmer sensations and having a bird's-eye view of the landscape, you can start your itinerary of the interior of Catalonia by crossing reservoirs by aerostat balloon, starting from the Sau reservoir in the Osona region and following the course of the River Ter to its mouth in the Costa Brava.

Flights in Zona Volcànica de la Garrotxa Natural Park of the offer views of volcano territory that is worth covering from one end to the other in order to enjoy an incalculable number of natural and scenic mutations on the ground.

Cerdanya, one of Catalonia's biggest valleys, has a climate that favours balloon and ultralight flights and paragliding. Borne aloft by the wind, travelling from the mountain to the wide valleys, you can take daylight photos or fly on full-moon nights.

Further to the south, in the Berguedà region, you can also enjoy balloon flights over Cadí Natural Park or view Pedraforca, Collsacabra, or Sau Valley in the neighbouring Osona region.

The natural and climatic conditions of Ager Valley have made it one of Europe's major paragliding and delta wing venues. There are also several companies that offer flights by helicopter or twin-engined aircraft in which you can make your air debut at the side of a specialist monitor knowing that the companies that offer these courses guarantee all aspects of security. Located at the foot of Montsec, a range oriented from east to west, thereby facilitating the formation of the thermal currents that are essential for skydiving, this valley is a virgin zone far from the urban setting and ideal for many adventure sports and activities in contact with nature.

Flights by helicopter or twin-engined aircraft

Apart from the range of balloon flights, paragliding and delta wing flights, there are also several companies that offer helicopter or twin-engined aircraft flights to discover some of the country's tourist attractions. You can also fly over Barcelona and go to Montserrat, while other flights offer a tour of discovery of the Costa Brava, with the added attraction of being able to take extraordinary photographs.

Accessible multi-activity tourism

Fun for everyone

The rising popularity of adventure sports has revealed a clear preference for a series of activities that combine contact with nature and a spirit of endurance. There are many Catalan companies and destinations that have tailored their products and services so that everyone can enjoy them.

The Catalan tourist sector has worked to improve the accessibility of its services so that disabled people can enjoy their cultural, leisure and sports offer in equal conditions. This kind of accessible tourism is a key factor in any pluralistic, respectful and caring society.

To begin with, are the greenways, the former railway tracks that have been adapted for walkers and cycle tourism so that they are accessible to everyone. They may be found, among other places, in the Garrotxa region, a volcanic zone where it is also possible to take balloon flights with adapted baskets. In the Costa Brava, between mountains and sea, there is a section of the greenway that runs along a number of accessible beaches and this is suitable for adapted bicycles. In Camprodon, it is also possible to find routes for adapted bicycles, while in Garraf Natural Park and also in Cambrils there are natural itineraries that are especially adapted for people with limited vision.

If aquatic activities are preferred, Segre Olympic Park incorporates the most advanced technology for adapted canoeing in flatwater. In the Costa Brava-Alt Empordà region, some companies have adapted kayaking facilities, while the sailing school in the L'Escala Yacht Club has adapted its sailing facilities for disabled people. Besides courses for beginners and in technical aspects of sailing, this entity also organises the L'Escala Open Regatta of Accessible Sailing, which was held for the first time in 2009. For those who prefer the depths of the sea, especially adapted diving is offered in the Medes Islands.

For snow sport lovers, the majority of the Pyrenees resorts have adapted their installations so that everyone can enjoy his or her favourite sport in the ski season. Among these resorts are those of Boí Taüll, in the Terres de Lleida Pyrenees near Aigüestortes National Park; Vaquèira Beret, in Val d'Aran, and La Molina, in Cerdanya, where the International Paralympic Committee's (IPC) World Cup was held in 2009 with the participation with the best disabled skiers from around the world.

Horseback riding, too, is becoming an especially prominent activity, thanks to the efforts of centres that have made it accessible for everyone. For birdwatchers, Ebro Delta Natural Park has accessible observation points.

Nordic walking

Nordic walking, or ski walking, which originated in Finland, is the exercise of walking with poles that are especially designed for this sporting and leisure activity. Among other advantages, it offers the body improved physical fitness in a mild but effective way by stimulating the cardiovascular system and enhancing coordination and mobility. It is beneficial for everyone who wishes to improve his or her fitness regardless of age.

Enjoying lakes and rivers

In the natural setting of Poblet, one can have fun with the flying fox, or zip-line, climbing in a rockodrome or learning the meticulous techniques of archery. In the Costa Brava, one can engage in adventure activities such as rappelling or abseiling, crossing Tibetan-style bridges and rope climbing. In a setting located in Sant Miquel de Campmajor, there are thousands of square kilometres for fun activities such as paintball or raiding a 18^{th} -century fortress.

In the environs of Banyoles Lake, the adventure offer is complete, with the chance of doing archery or a course in mountain orientation. In Cerdanya you can enjoy potholing and different activities high in the air. The Collegats zone offers a large number of outdoor or open-air activities for groups and people of all ages so that everyone can enjoy themselves and discover what pure-state adventure is.

The Noguera Pallaresa zone offers canyoning, while Boí Valley concentrates a number of exceptional river spaces for canoeing and hydrospeed.

Tree walking

Catalonia has trees that are high enough to engage in activities that simulate the experience of an adventure film in some remote part of the world. For example, the offer includes the flying fox or zip-line, Tibetan bridges, lianas and other activities provided by a range of adventure parks scattered throughout the country. Based on age-old methods that have been used in many parts of the world to cross abysses and flooded rivers, all these activities offer the sensation of flying among trees, or they test balancing skills with walks on cables and ropes at some height above the ground. These circuits are suitable for everyone, and are monitored by professional guides who observe all the legally-required security measures.

Another Pyrenees reference point is the Port-Ainé ski resort, from which one can set out on numerous excursions with 4x4 quads, or go rafting on the Noguera River, or enjoy the maximum pleasures of canyoning in the Sant Pere ravine. The centre also offers archery facilities and a rockodrome for climbers.

Núria Valley in the Ripollès region is located in a zone that is ideal for multi-adventure activities, sailing and canoeing, and also horseback riding for small children. Another possibility is to plan your activities to go from the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean, or from the high mountain down to the sea. This offer includes several aquatic sports such as canyoning, flatwater canoeing, kayaking in the sea and, after an orientation course, taking routes from the interior to the shore on horseback or mountain bike.

At Pals beach, on the Costa Brava, you can hire a catamaran or sea kayak and explore the Girona coastline.

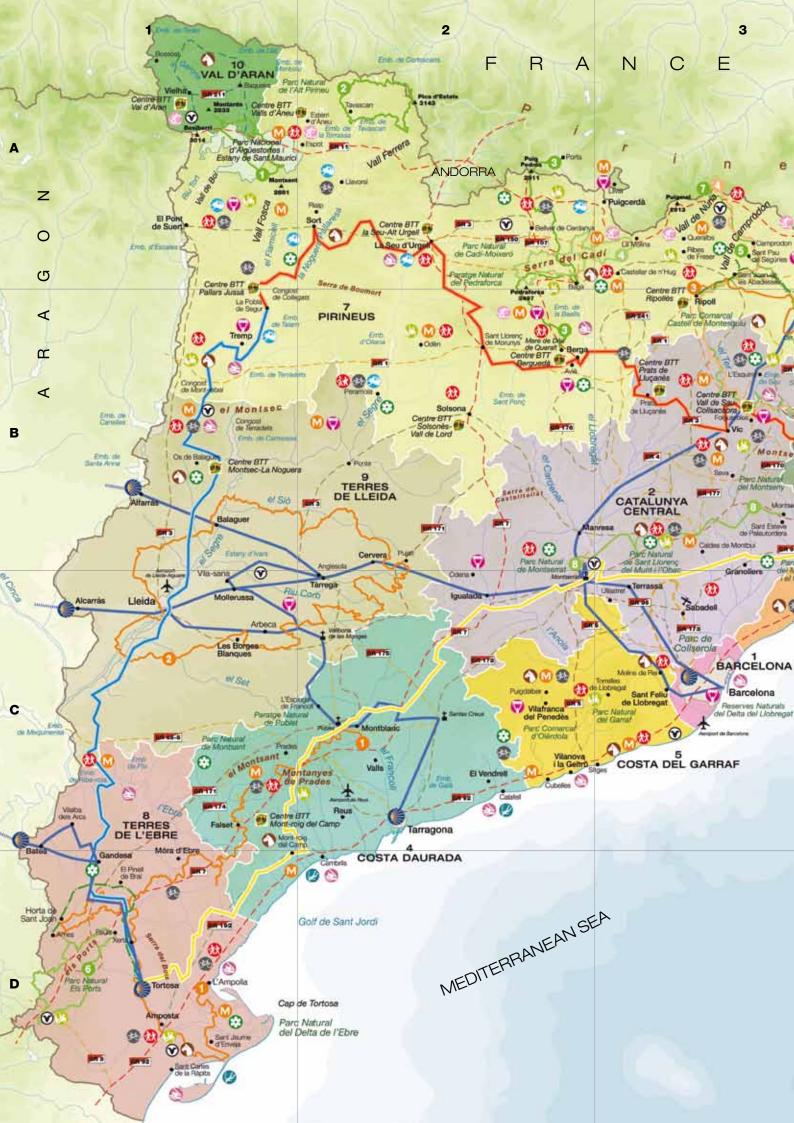

Moreover, at different points of the country there are spaces that are planned for fun, being together and, of course, respect for the environment, with a wide choice of activities, for example touchball (war game in the forest), in which participants practice and experience skills, movements, decisions and excitement that do not come along very often.

Catalonia offers a number of itineraries in all the zones around the country for Nordic walking, an exercise with poles similar to ski poles, which can be enjoyed on the beaches of Calafell and others in the Costa Daurada, or forests in the Lleida region and central Catalonia, as well as in sea and mountain settings of the Costa Brava and La Garrotxa Volcanic Zone.

Sports, nature and adventure test the endurance and skills of participants while also offering a wide range of options for groups of friends and schoolchildren, as well as family and company groups.

Activity & Nature Holidays Club Directory

Established in 1996, the Activity & Nature Holidays Club now consists of a hundred and nine companies working to offer activities to tourist agents and visitors who can enjoy being in permanent contact with nature and the landscapes of the country.

The offer is extensive and varied: the following directory presents the enterprises that are Club members so that you can choose what to do, where to sleep and where to find information during your stay in Catalonia.

03. ASSOCIACIÓ D'EMPRESARIS TURÍSTICS MONTSENY

The aim of the association is to offer visitors to the Montseny Natural Park a comfortable stay that, always respecting the environment, will introduce them to the great wealth of natural, cultural and human resources of Montseny. Among the members are many hotels and restaurants working with the producers and artisans of the zone to provide a wide range of cuisine, from the most traditional to the most innovative. The offer is completed with accommodation in small hotels, camp sites, rural tourism houses and apartments for tourists. Moreover, there are several companies that organise hiking, horseback-riding, and multiadventure activities.

04. ASSOCIACIÓ D'AMICS DE CAVALLS DEL VENT

Cavalls del Vent offers a circular mountain crossing that includes eight monitored mountain refuges in Cadí-Moixeró Natural Park, between the Berguedà and Cerdanya regions. The accommodation is communal rooms and it is necessary to bring sheets or a sleeping bag. We also recommend that you bring a hand lamp or head lamp since most of the refuges have solar plagues and at night there is no light. The Cavalls del Vent activities are offered from June to September and are suitable for all kinds of public, except for children younger than ten years of age.

09. CAMINS DE VENT

Balloon flights are an activity to be enjoyed with family and friends, for people of all ages. They offer unique sensations, extraordinary views and the delight of being in an environment different from our own. A dream for many people and one that is easy to make come true. Balloon flights can be made all over Catalonia. We generally fly over the Anoia, Segarra, Urgell, Pla d'Urgell and the Bages regions. A 4x4 vehicle picks you up when you land. We then drink a toast and have a sit-down breakfast, after which we give you a report of the flight in photos and a flight certificate. We are well equipped to offer accessible tourism. This activity is not recommended for pregnant women.

14. ELS 3 MONTS (CONSORCI TURISME VALLÈS ORIENTAL)

Els 3 Monts is a hiking route that links the natural parks of the Barce-Iona region - El Montseny, Sant Llorenç del Munt and Serra de l'Obac and Montserrat - by means of a sign-posted itinerary divided into six stages. Along its 106 kilometres, the walker will discover the changing forms of nature in easy progression. Montseny appears slow and eternal, Sant Llorenç i l'Obac is wild and rugged while, closer to the cluster of prominent peaks of Montserrat, the landscape becomes magical and capricious. This is mid-altitude mountain terrain presenting little technical difficulty. However, the route does present some steep climbs and minimal physical form is essential to complete it. One must bear in mind that each stage requires an average time of between four and six hours per day.

22. KAYAK DEL TER

This company offers a tourist trip along the River Ter in three sections, two of which are covered in kayak and one in Canadian canoe. The riverbank landscapes lining the route and the way they change from one season to another are the most surprising part of the trip. Travelling along a river that is part of the Xarxa Natura 2000 (Nature Network 2000), coming under the auspices of the European LIFE project, makes it possible to discover a setting that is rich in birdlife, botany and fauna. The river trips can also be combined with walking and bicycle excursions, while an ornithological circuit is also offered with sighting points at several places on the plain (bird watching).

24. LA RUTA DEL CISTER

The Cistercian Route takes in three regions: Alt Camp, Conca de Barberà and Urgell and it links up the three most emblematic monasteries of Catalunya Nova (Catalonia after the twelfth-century conquest of Ramon Berenguer IV): Santes Creus, Poblet and Vallbona de les Monges. The office managing the route promotes the three Cistercian monasteries, the tourist resources of the 65 towns of the zone (agriculture and food products, arts and crafts, museums, landscape, festivities, etc.), the GR-175 Cistercian Route (which is included in the extensive network of signposted paths of Europe), Trek Orientation on the Cistercian Route, and the summer Concert Cycle of the Cistercian Route.
